

The Resume: Your First Impression

The resume is usually the first item the admissions board will look at when reviewing applications. Do you, on average, know how much time is spent on the resume you might have spent hours working on? Less than a minute.

But "Art takes time—Monet grew his gardens before he painted them."

Often, it's from this quick resume once-over that they develop their first impression of you.

You want this to be good – no, an AMAZING – first impression. One that will convince them to keep reading, not because they need to, but because they genuinely want to get to know you better.

Who is this service for?

- You, if you do not yet have a resume draft.
- You have a draft

How this works

In this 4-stage process, I will...

Stage 1: Interview you about your experiences/achievements.

Stage 2: Brainstorm/consult with you.

Stage 3: Prepare a resume draft so I can provide feedback and additions.

Stage 4: Edit the resume with your revisions and additions.

Benefits

- Organize and present your work experience and educational background.
- Highlight your most impressive experiences/achievements.
- Address any gaps or inconsistencies in your timeline.
- Show that your experience matches the requirements of your target program.
- Save your time.
