

SOP + Resume

The resume is usually the first item the admissions board will look at when reviewing applications. Do you, on average, know how much time is spent on the resume you might have spent hours working on? Less than a minute.

But "Art takes time—Monet grew his gardens before he painted them."

Often, it's from this quick resume once-over that they develop their first impression of you.

You want this to be good – no, an AMAZING – first impression. One that will convince them to keep reading, not because they need to, but because they genuinely want to get to know you better.

Once you have the CV the next document inline is your Statement of Purpose (SOP). This is your opportunity to express your genuine interest in joining the university or organization and continuing your research or work. It is also a chance to highlight how well your skills and qualifications align with the group project or the university's overall goals and values.

Stage 1: Interview you about your experiences/achievements for preparing an outline of your resume.

Stage 2: Brainstorm/consult with you. Brainstorm/consult with you. During this brainstorming session, we will discuss a core idea, seminal experiences to include in the statement of purpose, and a structure for the statement of purpose.

Stage 3: Prepare a resume + SOP outline so I can provide feedback and additions. The outline for your essay and resume will be based on your responses to the questionnaire and the brainstorming session. The outline consists of prompts and bullet points. It is NOT a draft.

Stage 4: You prepare a draft and we begin solidifying precise information with revisions and additions.

Benefits

- Organize and present your work experience and educational background.
- Highlight your most impressive experiences/achievements.
- Address any gaps or inconsistencies in your timeline.
- Show that your experience matches the requirements of your target program.
- Save your 'crunch' time.
